Orrstown and United Way brighten the day of local third grader

Angela Tatum, vice president and relationship manager from Orrstown Bank's commercial lending team, reads to Analia, a third grader at Downey Elementary School in Harrisburg, as part of United Way's Bridges Society program.

"Analia is a great writer and we had a lot of fun working together during the scavenger hunt for books," said Tatum.

Administered by the United Way of the Capital Region, Bridges Society brings together emerging local leaders and provides them with opportunities to give and volunteer. Tatum serves as the vice chair of the program.

"Education is a core United Way initiative since studies have shown that a student's reading ability in third grade is a predictor of future academic success," explained Tatum.
