Orrstown Bank donates $27,500 to local education programs

Jump Street

Orrstown Bank donated $5,000 to Harrisburg-based Jump Street to support their “School to Table” workforce development program. In use at local schools, the program is designed to support interest in the fields of science, technology, engineering, and math by using agriculture study. Students learn engineering solutions for water flow along with chemistry, botany, harvesting techniques, food safety, and how to distribute the products they grow.

Masonic Villages

Orrstown Bank donated $10,000 to Masonic Villages to fund scholarships to attend the child care center at their Elizabethtown campus.

“Many families are not able to afford our dynamic child care programs without assistance. The EITC program ensures that household economics is not a barrier to the best education for every child,” said Margaret Chapman, bequest and grant specialist at Masonic Villages.

The child care center’s kindergarten program is renowned for a curriculum that allows for a smooth transition to first grade at the local school district.
